

Visit by Saga Univ. and Tokushima Univ. in Japan on Thur, November 19 and Fri, November 20, 2015

The KAKEHASHI Project - The Bridge for Tomorrow are youth exchange programs intended to create a bridge between Japan and the United States. In 2013, LaGuardia Community College participated in this project, in which nearly 50 CUNY students went on a 10-day fully-funded trip to Japan. The goal of the project was to promote students' global experience, with a special focus on contemporary Japanese society, attractions, and cultural values.

On Thursday, November 19 and Friday, November 20, 2015, LaGuardia will be hosting a reciprocal visit by 50 students and faculty members from Saga University and Tokushima University, two regional national universities in Japan. During their visits, students will have opportunities to see their presentations about different social and cultural aspects of contemporary Japan (in English), interact with Japanese students in small groups, and introduce the complexity of the American society and culture with reference to the topics of their presentations.

If you are interested in participating in the event, please sign up at <http://bit.ly/lagccEventReg>. These are whole-day events, but you can also participate in only part of the day.
